ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Miranda King has been involved with technology since her early days as a child playing on her parents' office's Apple][e. She received her B.A. in Communication, History, and Linguistics from the University of Texas at Austin in 2005. In 2007, Miranda took a detour from her career path and became an EMT. Since that time, she has been striving to balance being a parent with her passion for technology. Miranda spends most of her time between Austin and the Smith Family House where she is surrounded by all kinds of computers, gadgets, and toys. You can follow her on Twitter @macw_king. Description: Meet Zoe Zamora: she's an ordinary girl living in an ordinary high school in an ordinary country. But she's also blind, and like many students, she's turning to technology to help her succeed. Using only voice commands and software, Zoe can read and translate anything from English to Spanish, complete her homework, and even go to school. Learn f988f36e3a
